Further Up In Navy Building

Preparations are being made for a further speed-up in the huge naval reconstructon programme now train. This is due to the Admiralty's PARTICULARS OF THE LOT. protection of trade in war-plans which have made phenomenal progress in the last two years,

Some time in June there will be Inid the keels of 20 new 900-tons escort vessels of an entirely new type -as large as a pre-war destroyerand described to me as the fastest, best-armed, and most efficient of their class in any navy.

Contracts for these ships were placed within less than a month after their nuthorisation by Parliament early in March, but under existing naval treaties it is obligatory to give the other alguatory Powers three months' advance notice of the laying of the keels. Such notice was given in March, so that the actual laying down of the ships can begin in June.

WELDED HULLS That, however, . is not the whole story. In the interval materials are being assembled and contracts placed for armament and equipment, with the result that when actual building starts the ships will go forward at incredible speed.

All are due to join the Fleet 12 Construction, they represent a type absolutely new to the British or any other navy. They will be equally dangerous to hostile aircraft or submarines.

be welded. It is to be regretted that further details of these pocket destroyers cannot be released, though they are now known to practically every Admirally in the world.

Eight of the 16 destroyers authorised this year have been ordered inpairs, and in their case, too, construction will proceed at a tempo never before attempted. Known as the "M" class, they are understood to be vessels of about 1,800 tons. Tenders for the other eight destroyers of this year's programme are now being considered. They are understood also to be vessels of about 1,800 tons.

HEAVY CONSTRUCTION Although the Navy's primary demand is for escort vessels and destroyers, steady progress is being made with heavier construction. Built, building, and projected we have the following ships:

Nine battleships, five of 35,000 tons mounting 10 14in guns; four of 40,000 tons with nine or 10 16in

Six aircraft-carriers of 23,000 tons, with a total capacity of 360 to 400 'planes: Two 10,000-ton cruisers with 12

6in guns: 13 8,000-ton cruisers with 12 6in 10 5,450-ton cruisers with 10 5.2in 40 destroyers, of 1,700 to 1,900

Numerous submarines, mainly of ocean-going types; 20 000-ton escort vessels specially designed for anti-aircraft and anti-submarine duty, and four smaller escort vessels; Three large and fast minelayers; J Numerous boom defence and har- | S bour protection vessels and motor De torpedo boats.

600 PER CENT. INCREASE Further, 16 cruisers and 36 destroyers of older types have been taken in hand for conversion as A.A. and anti-submarine escort ships, The whole of this work, excluding that on the converted vessels, entails a tonnage which exceeds 050,000, a figure never before approached in peace-time and probably not in war. The King of Canada

FOR THE first time in history the North American continent now has an actual physical monarchy, in the person of His Majesty King George VI who, from the moment he stepped ashore at Quebec on Wednesday night, became King George VI of Canada.

Although His Majesty sailed from London in the Royal liner Empress of Australia as King of England he automatically became King of Canada with his arrival in the senior Dominion.

When he enters the United States on June 7 for his five-day state visit to President Roosevelt -the first British Ruler to visit the great nation lost by his namesake in the eighteenth century—the King will once again become King of England, since it was as such that he received the President's invitation.

Such constitutional technicalities are the direct result of the Statute of Westminster, enacted in 1931 to give effect to the resolutions of the Imperial Conferences of 1926 and 1930.

The Statute-Magna Carta of the Dominions-changed the entire relationship between the Crown and the Empire. It made the King belong to his Dominions, and the Dominions to him. Each Dominion was designated a self-governing member of the Commonwealth, and the King became the head of each individual State.

Indeed it is almost certain that future Rulers of the British Commonwealth will be required to be crowned separately, in the capitals of each Dominion, as King of Canada, King of Australin, King of South Africa and King of New Zealand. Technically, although there has been but one Coronation, His Majesty is regarded in the Dominions not as King of England but as King of the Dominions.

The Statute of Westminster implies that each new reigning monarch shall, as soon as possible, visit his various: Dominions. India would under ordinary circumstances have reand Empress had not conditions in that Dominion been so unto-day Right?

Because of the vast distances involved in travelling to Australia and New Zealand, it is unlikely that these Dominions will receive visits from the present Ruler and his consort.

But it is safe to presume that His Majesty's successor, Princess Elizabeth, will be crowned. not only in Westminster Abbey. but in Ottawa, Canberra, Wellington, Durban and New Delhi.

HY does Britain need an army? Is it necessary? This year it is costing £161 millions, is £46 millions more ever before and four times what it cost in 1914.

Surely, it may be said, a strong navy and air force should suffice for our protection! As tax-payers ought we not to protest? Is it not possible, indeed probable, that an inefficient War Office, with its empty-headed old generals, is to blame for this seemingly gross extravagunco? Let us examine the problem. The functions which the army is expected to perform are:

(a) Home Delence. (b) Defence of naval and aerial bases, which exist to enable our navy and air force to safeguard communications and to operate freely in distant

(c) Defence, and, to some extent, policing of the overseas Empire. (d) Fulfilment of treaty obligations with France, Portugal, Egypl and Iraq.

(e) Provision of strategic reserves. These various functions are not a succession of alternatives. They may have to be carried out in full and simultaneously, as in the Great War,

THEY entail that the Army must be organised, trained and equipped to every conceivable type of country and climate and against opponents differing as widely as the flerce mountaineers of Waziristan, the Arabs of Palestine and the mechanised forces of Germany. In mere, yerbal description, they have altered but little from those which an army was expected to fulfil a quarter of a century ago, Actually, however, there have been, both in order of importance and method of fulfilment, immense changes.

Home defence was a matter of minor importance in 1914, when a superior Navy appeared to afford a sure guard to the British Isles. It has now, in A.A. defence, jumped into first place, and seven divisions of front line troops, with an order of readiness superior by far to that expected of the B.E.P. in 1914. In place, petrol and oil would be in cavalry have been mechanised, and infantry can be carried in bounds onethird at a time by lorry. third at a time by lorry.

This change, though exceedingly costly, opens up great possibilities of the renewal of open warfare where conditions admit and instruments are skilfully exploited. On the other hand, that form of mechanisation which lies in the replacement of man by machine—by the Bren, for instance—has made tremendous bounds in recent years. With the numerous antidotes to the think, it has so greatly increased the power of the defence that the aggressor is likely to succeed only if he mannges to disarm his opponent by the suddenness and overwhelming strength of his stroke. THE Army is being reorganised into new formations as follows: (a) "Armoured Divisions," of which we have one and, later, shall have two at home and one in Egypt. They consist of armoured and mechanised

cavalry brigades, tank brigades and mechanised artillery. (b) Divisions, in which infantry forms the principal constituent. They are to contain six or nine battalions, together with an appropriate attribution of the other arms according to the task with which they are confronted. For instance, the 7th Divizion in Palestine at the moment contains nine battalions, one horse cavalry regiment and a tiny allot-

They are known as "Motorised Divisions." In the ordinary division, only ten Bren guns per battalion are on carriers, the heavy machine-gun battalion is motorised and infantry brigades can be transported, one at a time, by strength of some 20 divisions. These changes, together with the repletion of stocks which had faller dangerously low, and the construction of barracks to replace tenements no longer habitable, and the transfer, due to political changes, of 10,000 men from the Indian to the Home Estab--lishment -- account -largely -- for - the - recent immense increases in Army costs. To-day, Italy Japan and possibly Spain may added to our enemies. Russia is an enigma, in whom we may place hope but not faith, and the small nations incline to be neutral

PARIS, May 19.

LORD HALIFAX has informed the French Government that Great Britain has accepted in principle the suggestion for reciprocal aid for Russia in the event of attacks arising from Soviet support for Poland, Rumania and Turkey.

This information was made available to the "United. Press" last night by a high diplomatic official in Paris.

According to this source, which confirms exclusive "United Press" reports from an equally unimpeachable source in London (published in the "Telegraph" on Wednesday), France has been informed that the British Note is now en route to Moscow.

The British proposal is that Britain, France and Soviet Russia guarantee each other against aggression arising out of their support for Poland, Rumania and tions Committee to-day, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Turkey. Chief of the Federal Investigation Bureau, said

Soviet Russia will, probably be asked to join the existing Anglo-French guarantees to Poland, Rumania and Turkey. Greece, which is also guaranteed by France and Britain, is not mentioned.

If, in the execution of its guarantees to Poland, Rumania and Turkey, Soviet Russia becomes involved in war, the resources of Great Britain and France will be placed at her disposal.—United Press.

The British note, is based on the original French project of offering aid to Soviet-Russia in the event of Russin being the victim of aggression as a result of Russian assistance to neighbouring States guaranteed by Britain and France. Russia would therefore receive

French and British armed support if she became involved in warlike complications as a result of aiding Poland or Rumania. . The Soviet acceptance of the now British note is expected.

The King of Canada

FOR THE first time in history the North American continent now has an actual physical monarchy, in the person of His Majesty King George VI who, from the moment he stepped ashore at Quebec on Wednesday night, became King George VI of Canada.

Although His Majesty sailed from London in the Royal liner Empress of Australia as King of England he automatically became King of Canada with his arrival in the senior Dominion.

When he enters the United States on June 7 for his five-day state visit to President Roosevelt -the first British Ruler to visit the great nation lost by his namesake in the eighteenth century—the King will once again become King of England, since it was as such that he received the President's invitation.

Such constitutional technicalities are the direct result of the Statute of Westminster, enacted in 1931 to give effect to the resolutions of the Imperial Conferences of 1926 and 1930.

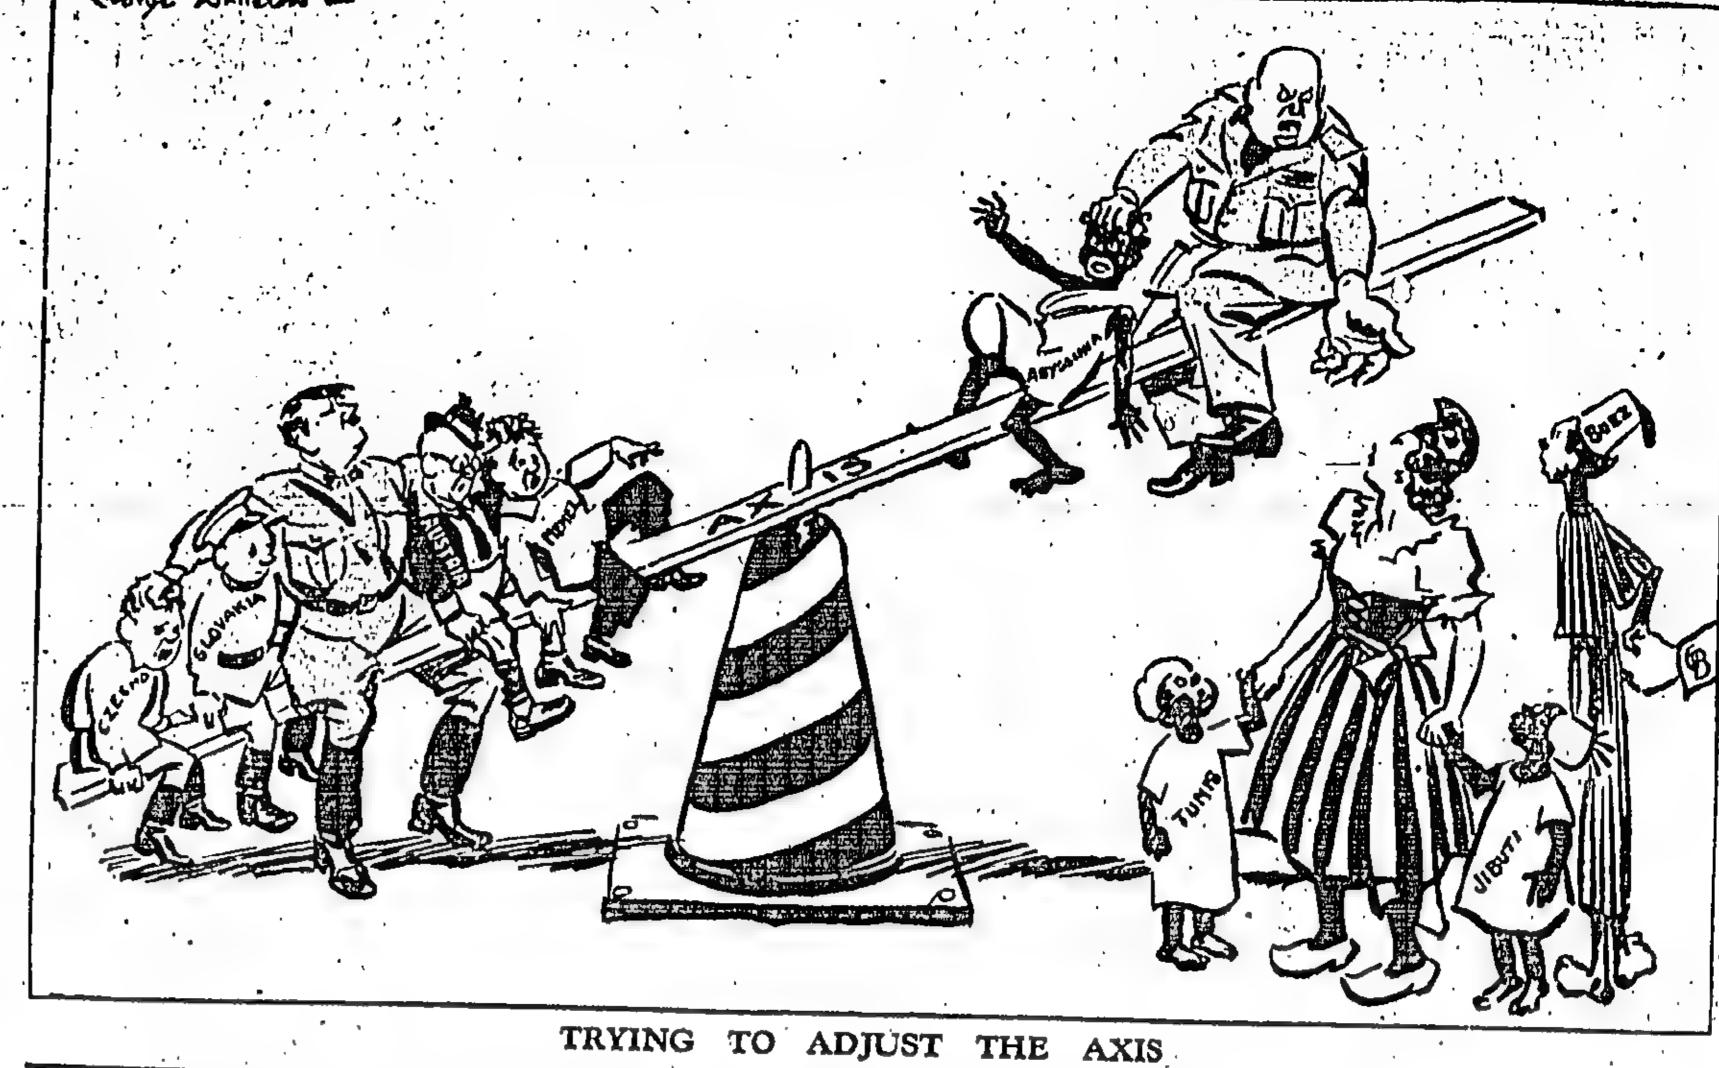

The Statute-Magna Carta of the Dominions—changed the entire relationship between the Crown and the Empire. It made the King belong to his Dominions, and the Dominions to him. Each Dominion was designated a self-governing member of the Commonwealth, and the King became the head of each individual State.

Indeed, it is almost certain that future Rulers of the British Commonwealth will be required to be crowned separately, in the capitals of each Dominion, as King of Canada, King of Australia, King of South Africa and King of New Zealand. Technically, although there has been but one Coronation, His Majesty is regarded in the Dominions not as King of England but as King of the Dominions.

The Statute of Westminster implies that each new reigning monarch shall, as possible, visit Dominions. India would under ordinary circumstances have received a visit from the Emperor and Empress had not conditions in that Dominion been so unsettled.

Because of the vast distances involved in travelling to Australin and New Zealand, it is unlikely that these Dominions will receive visits from the present Ruler and his consort.

But it is safe to presume that His Majesty's successor, Princess Elizabeth, will be crowned. not only in Westminster Abbey. but in Ottawa, Canberra, Wellington; Durban and New Delhi.

WERE ATTACKED-3

HY does Britain need an army? Is it necessary? This year it is costing £161 millions, which is £46 millions more than ever before and four times what it cost in 1914.

Surely, it may be said, a strong navy and air force should suffice for our protection! As tax-payers ought we not to protest? Is it not possible, indeed probable, that an inemcient War Office, with its _empty-headed old generals, is to -blame for this seemingly gross extravagance?

Let us examine the problem. The functions which the army is expected to perform are: (a) Home Defence.

(b) Defence of naval and aerial bases; which exist to enable our navy and air force to safeguard communications and to operate freely in distant theatres.

(c) Defence, and, to some extent, policing of the overseas Empire. (d) Fulfilment of treaty obligations with France, Portugal, Egypt and Iraq. (e) Provision of strategic reserves.

These various functions are not a succession of alternatives. They may have to be carried out in full and timultaneously, as in the Great War. THEY entail 'that the Army must be organised, trained and equipped to fight in every conceivable type of country and climate and against opponents differing as widely as the flerce mountaineers of Waziristan, the Arabs of Palestine and the mechanised forces of Germany.

In mere verbal description, they have altered but little from those which an army was expected to fulfil a quarter of a century ago. Actually however, there have been, both in order of importance and method of fulfilment, immense changes.

Home defence was a matter of minor importance in 1914, when a superior Navy appeared to afford a sure guard to the British Isles. , It has now, in A.A. defence, jumped into first place, and seven divisions of the Territorial Army are to become front line troops, with an order of readiness superior by far to that expected of the B.E.F. in 1914. These troops have the responsibility, in conjunction with A.R.P. balloon barrages, and aerial fighters, of pro-tecting the heart of the Empire, and success or failure may determine our fate in the first few weeks of a war.

A SECOND great change. A SECOND great change is that of mechanisapractically vanished, and with him the burden of forage which, in the war. exceeded, not only in bulk, but even in weight, that of ammunition. In place, petrol and oil would be in demand by thousands of tons. Apart from the Tank Corps, now growing apace, the whole of the artillery, the transport and the greater part of the cavalry have been mechanised, and infantry can be carried in bounds onethird at a time by lorry. This change, though exceedingly costly, opens up great possibilities of the renewal of open warfare where conditions admit and instruments are skilfully exploited.

On the other hand, that form of mechanisation which lies in the replacement of man by machine—by the Bren, for instance—has made tremendous bounds in recent years. With the numerous antidotes to the tank, it has so greatly increased the power of the defence that the aggressor is likely to succeed only if he mannges to disarm his opponent by the suddenness and overwhelming strength of his stroke.

THE Army is being reorganised into new formations as follows: (a) " Armoured Divisions," of which we have one and, later, shall have two at home and one in Egypt. They consist of armoured and mechanised cavalry brigades, tank brigades and mechanised artillery. (b) Divisions, in which infantry forms the principal constituent. They are to contain six or nine battalions, together with un appropriate attribution of the other arms according to the task with which they are confronted. For instance, the 7th Division in Palestine at the moment contains nine battallons, one horse catalry regiment and a tiny allot ment of guns.

Some of these divisions are wholly motorised and all their Bren machineguns are transported on lightly armoured carriers.

They are known as "Motorised Divialons." In the ordinary division, only ten Bren guns per battalion are on carriers, the heavy machine-gun battalion is motorised and infantry brigades can be transported, one at a time, by

The Territorial field army is following suit. It is to consist, in a future not far distant, of one " armoured division," three meterised divisions, and nine ordinary divisions. so organised and equipped; it will,

when fully trained, constitute a striking instrument of great mobility and power. Adding to it our other field forces: two infantry divisions in the Middle East and one armoured and four infantry divisions at home, we shall have, exclusive of garrisons and Dominion troops, a total striking strength of some 20 divisions. These changes, together with the pletion of stocks which had fallen longer habitable, and the transfer, due to political changes, of 10,000 men from the Indian to the Home Estab--lishment, account largely for the recent immense increases in Army costs. Then there are the changes caused by the submarine and the aeroplane. They render it difficult, until command of the sea and ascendancy in the air have been achieved, for an Army to be transported through hostile waters-more especially, narrow waters dangerously low, and the construction of barracks to replace tenements no such as the Mediterranean. It has accordingly become doubtful if and when forces in Australasia and India can reinforce, or, be reinforced by, forces in Britain and the Middle East, and troops in Britain reinforce troops in the Middle East, Yet, in spite of increased responsibilities in Palestine and Iraq our field Army, together with reserves, is less by 125,000 men than it was in 1914.

·FINALLY, there is the change in the political situation to consider. 1914, France, Russia, Japan, Belgium. Berbia, were our allies. Italy and Spain were neutral. To-day, Italy, Japan and possibly Spain may be added to our enemies. Russla is an enigma, in whom we may place hope but not faith, and the small nations incline to be neutral.

Moreover, the dictator nations, in their role of aggressors, have the priceless benefit of the initiative. Thus, in the intervening years, the balance of power, particularly as concerns the

In this case, where the disproportion of force is high and the initiative lies with the assailant, it would seem dangerous, if not suicidal, to rely in our plans on the power of the Prench to maintain their line for a long period without support.

Enough has now perhaps been said to show that the War Office and the generals would have been wanting in their duty had they falled to demand an increase in the Army's strength. Is that Army, with its present strength, organisation and system of recruitment, equal to the tasks likely to fall to its lot?

FILIPINO DAVIS CUP STARS IN EXHIBITION

BEATEN BY TSUI WAI-PUI

A tricky wind blowing in from the direction of the harbour made effective ball control difficult yesterday at the Hongkong C.C. where the Filipino` Davis Cup players, Amado Sanchez and Felicisimo Ampon, played their second series of exhibition tennis matches in Hongkong, and contributed to a great extent to the large number of mistakes made by almost everyone taking part in the exhibition.

Nevertheless, the tennis served up |was thoroughly enjoyable, and if the standard was not, consistently high the conditions were to blame. However, at times, when they found their touch. Sanchez and Ampon showed how they have reached the top rung in the Philippines' tennis ladder; now and then in the course of the matches, each would pull out a stroke as glorious in its execution as it was impossible to retrieve.

On the whole, local players acquitted themselves quite well. The Rumjahn cousins, though beaten in 6-4. two straight sets, made the visitors go all out for victory and the scores of 7-5, 6-4 give an idea of how close the two sets were. Ampon, the "Mighty Mite," does not rely on strong ground strokes with which to win his matches; rather, he keeps the rallies going, meanwhile working for an opening to score his winner. This he demonstrated yesterday against Tsui Yunpul, the Colony runner-up, in the first of the singles matches. Dr. Wellington Koo, the Chinese Ambassador to France, was among the large crowd present at the match. The weather was dull after yesterday's rain, the light was not too good and the court was in poor condition.

Peter Kane In Aggressiv Mood In Fight Against Belgian Bantamweight

London, April 29. Peter Kane, our world's flyweight champion, was back in his best and most aggressive form at the Albert Hall last night, when he beat Albert Legrand, the bantamweight champion of Belgium, the fight being stopped during the eighth round.

Legrand had then been knocked | round a well-judged uppercut, foltiown three times and the last of lowing three hooks, lifted Legrand these punches, an amazingly fast off his feet, right-hand to the jaw, as Legrand tried to leap away, had resulted in count of nine seconds and had practically ended the resistance of

This is significant, for Kane will soon be invited to fight for the British flyweight title and will, of course, be called on also to defend his world's title in due course. He will now have to consider very pass the scales at 8st, or whether to relinquish the flyweight championship and tackle that of the next

Then, in the fourth round Legrand lost the edge of his speed and his attack was somewhat wild. Kane took full advantage of this, and suddenly tried his first real punch to the jaw. It landed with some force and was followed by a number of tarring body punches on a bewildered opponent.

That's What They Her In America....

CHE'S the sort of girl you expect to come and hulloo at you round the corner of the housewho looks at her best striding round in tweeds and brogues. She's the kind of girl who used: to think that fashion pages weren't meant for here -and so they weren't.

But now all that is changed. The American college girl has established herself as a type, and the adjective "rangey" has been tallored to suit her.

She's the devil-may-care jumper and skirt girl more fond of the country than the town, of low heels and high, and of waves than curls.

The "rangey" girl who looks her best in suits-and nowadays that doesn't mean that she's condemned to perpetual tweediness.

She should avoid black town suits-she can carry colour at any time and in any place, and should do so, She's the one who can wear skirts.

She's one of the few women who can get away with casual hair styles—dishevelled, wiry curls, or a low-swinging bob, turned under at the ends.

Her feet look their best, and feel their happiest, in fint shoes. She can wear platform shoes by day, wedge heels for a cocktail party (if her feet are small enough), thick cork-soled sandals in the evening (if she's not too tall).

BRITISH MILITARY AID FOR SOVIETS:

FRIDAY, MAY 119,

PARIS, May 19.

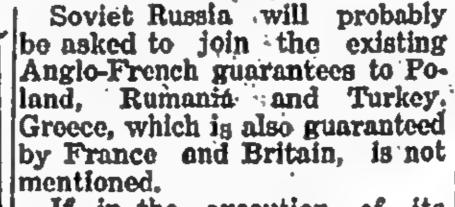

LORD HALIFAX has informed the French Government that Great Britain has accepted in principle the suggestion for reciprocal aid for Russia in the event of attacks arising from Soviet support for Poland, Rumania and Turkey.

This information was made available to the "United Press" last night by a high diplomatic official in Paris.

According to this source, which confirms exclusive 'United Press'' reports from an equally unimpeachable source in London (published in the "Telegraph" on Wednesday), France has been informed that the British Note is now en route to Moscow.

The British proposal is that Britain, France and Soviet Russia guarantee each other against aggression arising out of their support for Poland, Rumania and Russia would therefore receive French and British armed support if she became involved in warlike complications as a result of aiding January last year, when the Poland or Rumania.

Britain's Conditions For Loan To Spain

LONDON, May 18. GREAT BRITAIN is expected to review her Spanish policy if, as is anticipated, Italian and German troops are withdrawn from Spain after to-morrow's victory parade.

The question of a British loan to Spain may then become acute.

The report that M. van Zeeland has been entrusted with negotiations with the Spanish | Government on behalf of a group of Dutch and Swiss banks -according to the current vernot the applicant) will be required sion with the objective of arranging a £20,000,000 loan to Spain—has endowed the attitude of the British Government with added importance.

On the other hand the British are apprehensive lest any financial support they might sponsor for Spain would merely serve to help Spain meet payments due to Italy and Germany, mainly for war supplies. It has long been doubted here whether Spanish independence has assured that Britain's political and financial leaders are likely to withhold a loan to Spain.

It should encourage our own faint-hearted Government, which has been inclined to favour appeasement in the Far East, even after its failure in Europe.

Yet the only result of this policy has been to stimulate a violent anti-British campaign both in Japan and in the Japanese-controlled areas of China, based, no doubt, on the sound theory that one should attack the weakest point of the enemy's line. If the United States is ready to co-

The King of Canada

FOR THE first time in history the North American continent now has an actual physical monarchy, in the person of His Majesty King George. VI who, from the moment he stepped ashore at Quebec on Wednesday night, became King George VI of Canada...

Although His Majesty sailed from London in the Royal liner Empress of Australia as King of England he automatically became King of Canada with his arrival in the senior Dominion.

When he enters; the United States on June 7 for his five-day state visit to President Roosevelt -the first British Ruler to visit the great nation lost by his namesake in the eighteenth century—the King will once again become King of England, sinceit was as such that he received the President's invitation.

Such constitutional technicalities are the direct result of the Statute of Westminster, enacted in 1931 to give effect to the resolutions of the Imperial Conferences of 1926 and 1930.

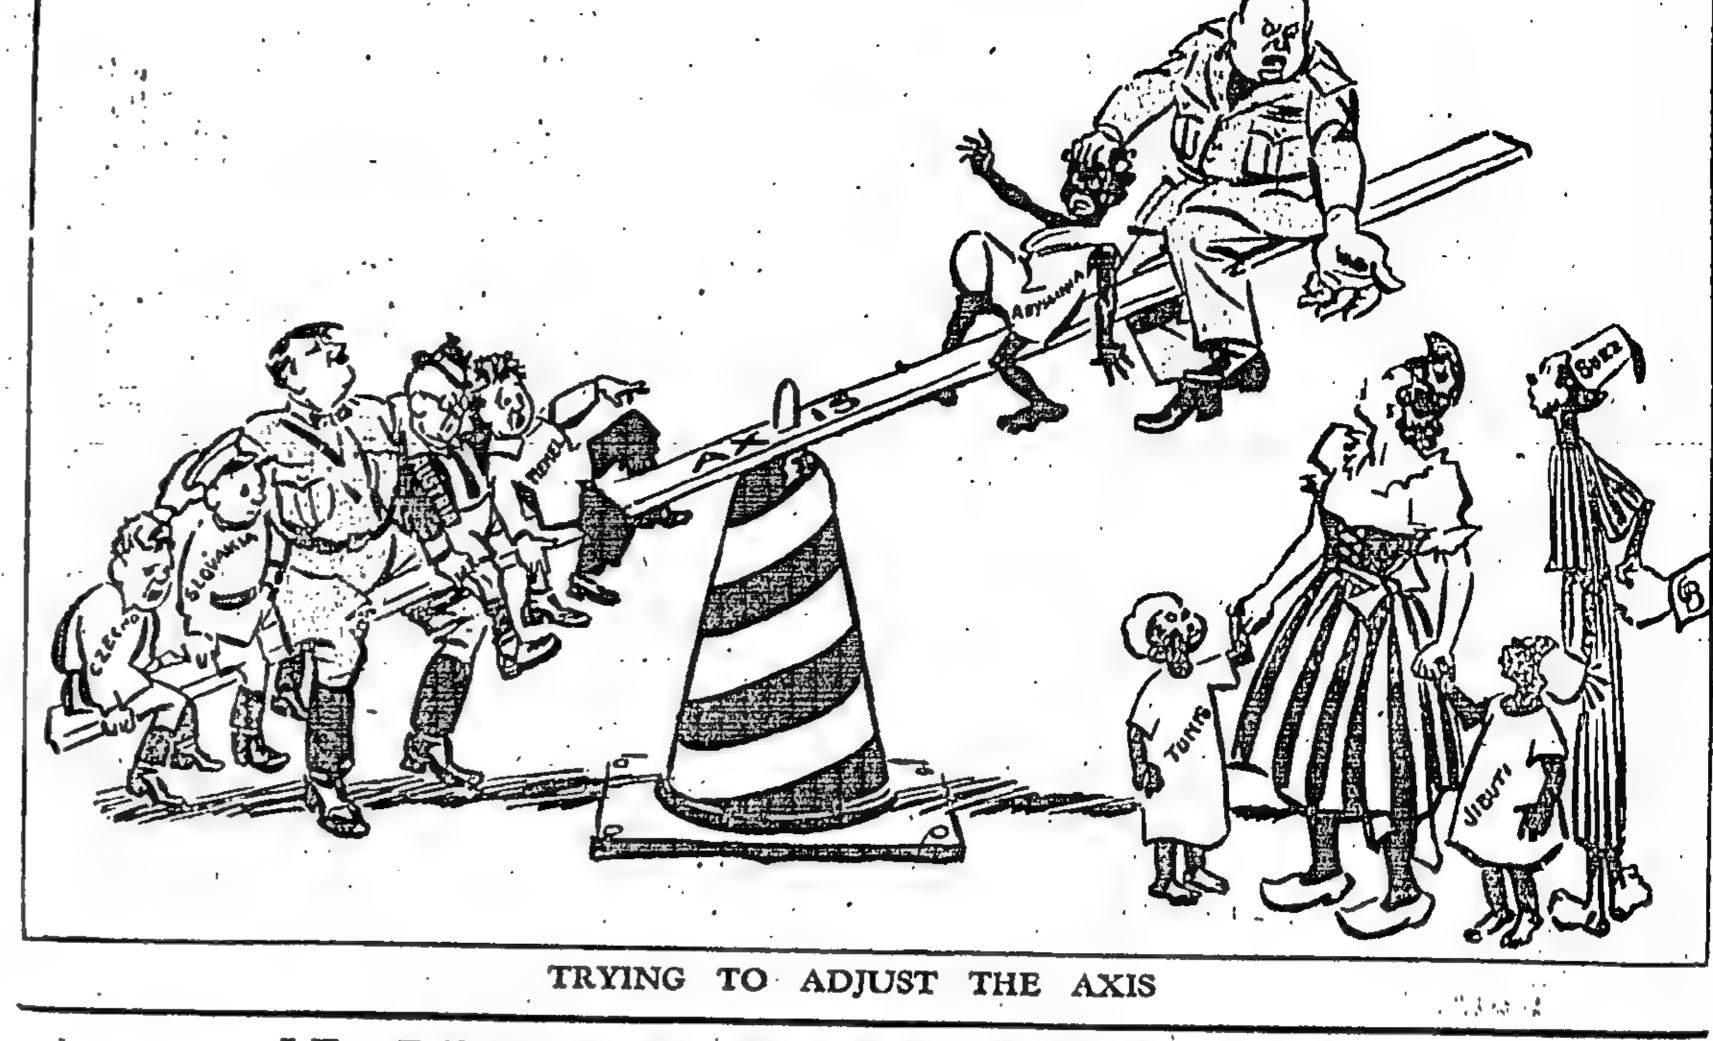

The Statute-Magna Carta of the Dominions-changed the entire relationship between the Crown and the Empire. It made the King belong to his Dominions, and the Dominions to him. Each Dominion was designated a self-governing member of the Commonwealth, and the King became the head of each individual State.

Indeed it is almost certain that future Rulers of the British Commonwealth will be required to be crowned separately, in the capitals of each Dominion, as King of Canada, King of Australia, King of South Africa and King of New Zealand. Technically, although there has been but one Coronation, His Majesty is regarded in the Dominions not as King of England but as King of the Dominions.

The Statute of Westminster implies that each new reigning monarch shall, as visit his Dominions. India would under ordinary circumstances have received a visit from the Emperor and Empress had not conditions in that Dominion been so unsettled:

Because of the vast distances involved in travelling to Australia and New Zealand, it is unlikely that these Dominions will receive visits from the present Ruler and his consort.

But it is safe to presume that. His Majesty's successor, Princess Elizabeth, will be crowned, not only in Westminster Abbey. but in Ottawa, Canberra, Wellington, Durban and New Delhi.

WERE

HY does Britain need an army? Is it necessary? This year it is costing £161 millions, which is £46 millions more than ever before and four dous bounds in recent years. times what it cost in 1914.

Surely, it may be said, a strong navy and air force should suffice for our protection! As tax-payers ought we not to protest? Is it not possible, indeed probable, that an inefficient War Office, with its empty-headed-old-generals,-is-toblame for this seemingly gross extravagance?

Let us examine the problem. The functions which the army is expected to perform are:

(a) Home Defence. (b) Defence of naval and aerial bases, which exist to enable our navy and air force to safeguard communications and to operate freely in distant theatres.

(c) Defence, and, to some extent, policing of the overseas Empire. (d) Fulfilment of treaty obligations with France, Portugal, Egypt and Irag. (c) Provision of strategic reserves. These various functions are not a succession of alternatives. They may have to be carried out in full and simultaneously, as in the Great War.

THEY entail that the Army must be organised, trained and equipped to fight in every conceivable type of country and climate and against opponents differing as widely as the flerce mountaineers of Waziristan, the Arabs of Palestine and the mechanised forces of Germany.

In mere verbal description, they have altered but little from those which an army was expected to fulfil a quarter of a century ago. Actually, however, there have been, both in order of importance and method of fulliment, immenso changes.

Home defence was a matter of minor importance in 1914, when a superior Navy appeared to afford a sure guard to the British Isles. It has now, in A.A. defence, jumped into first place, and seven divisions of the Territorial Army are to become front line troops, with an order of

The horse has practically vanished, and with him the burden of forage which, in the war. exceeded, not only in bulk, but even in weight, that of ammunition. In place, petrol and oil would be in demand by thousands of tons. Apart from the Tank Corps, now growing apace, the whole of the artillery, the transport and the greater part of the cavalry have been mechanised, and in-

THE Army is being reorganised into new formations as follows:

(a) " Armoured Divisions," of which we have one and, later, shall have two at home and one in Egypt. They consist of armoured and mechanise cavalry brigades, tank brigades and mechanised artillery.

(b) Divisions, in which infantry forms the principal constituent. They are to contain six or nine battalions, togather with an appropriate attribution of the other arms according to the task with which they are confronted. For instance, the 7th Division in Palestine at the moment contains nine battailons, one' horse cavalry regiment and a tiny allotment-of guns.

Some of these divisions are wholly motorised and all their Gren machineguns are transported on lightly armoured carriers.

They are known as " Motorised Divisions." In the ordinary division, only ten Bren guns per battalion are on carriers, the heavy machine-gun battalion is motorised and infantry brigades can be transported, one at a time, by

The Territorial field army is following suit. It is to consist, in a future not far distant, of one " armoured divislop," three motorised divisions, and nine ordinary divisions, So organised and equipped, it will,

when fully trained, constitute a siriking instrument of great mobility and power. Adding to it our other field forces: two infantry divisions in the Middle East and one armoured and four infantry divisions at home we shall have, exclusive of garrisons and Dominion troops, a total striking strength of some 20 divisions.

These changes, together with the repletion of stocks which had fallen dangerously low, and the construction of barracks to replace tenements no longer habitable, and the transfer, due to political changes, of 10,000 men from the Indian to the Home Establishment,-account largely for the recent immense increases in Army costs.

Then there are the changes caused by the submarine and the aeroplane. They render it difficult, until command of the sea and ascendancy in the air have been achieved, for an Army be transported through hostile waters-more especially narrow waters such as the Mediterranean. It has accordingly become doubtful

Army, together with reserves, is less by 125,000 men than it was in 1914.

FINALLY, there is the change in the political situation to consider. In 1914, France, Russia, Japan, Belglum, Berbla, were our allies. Italy and Spain were neutral. To-day, Italy, Japan and possibly Spain may added to our enemies. Russia is enigma, in whom we may place hopebut not faith, and the small nations incline to be neutral.

Moreover, the dictator nations, in their role of aggressors, have the priceless benefit of the initiative. Thus, in the intervening years, the balance of power, particularly as concerns

Enough has now perhaps been said to show that the War Office and the generals would have been wanting in their duty had they failed to demand an increase in the Army's strength. Is that Army, with its present strength, organisation and system of recruitment, equal to the tasks likely

Smashing Chinese Victory: Tungpeh Is Re-Occupied

SHANGHAI, May 19.

HINESE REPORTS here claim a major victory for the Chinese in reoccupying Tungpeh on the Honan-Hupeh border, following 48 hours of sanguinary fighting on the outskirts of the town and in the streets, in which 4,000 Japanese were killed.

THE belief that various pending problems between Japan and the United Biates are of the nature that they can be settled through mutual efforts between the two nations in view of the essential relationship between Japan and the United States, was understood to have been manifested when the Foreign Minister, Mr. Hachiro Arita, received Mr. Joseph Grew, the American Ambassador to to the latter's departure for home on furlough. Foreign Minister Arita, it is understood, is of the opinion that repetition of exchange of documents between the two countries tends to complicate the relations between them.

Japan, on Thursday morning prior

The Foreign Office chief believes, it is pointed out, that by extending the spirit of the letters exchanged between Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Foreign Minister Kold Hirota following outbreak of the Manchurian Incident, confirming that there does not exist any problem between the two countries which cannot be settled through diplomatic negotiations, various existing questions will steadily be settled if efforts are made to conduct negotiations on the basis of mutual amity and i sympathetic understanding.

AN ASSURANCE During his interview with Ambassador Grew on Thursday, Foreign' Minister Arita assured that Japan's aspirations for a new order in East Asia are by no means prejudicial or detrimental to the developments and stability of the American interests in China, it is revealed.

Foreign Minister Arita reportedly pointed out that the misglyings apparent in some quarters of America over alleged intentions of Japan in regard to other parts of East Asia than China are unfounded because Japan's relations with these areas would be in conflict with American interests there,

COUSINS START SHAKILY

Starting shakily, the Ruminha cousins dropped the first four games against the visitors but pulled up to 3-4 and then 5-5, after which Sirdar dropped his service. Sanchez then held his own to clinch the first set which saw the Filipinos in very good light indeed, especially in the opening onmes when their strong net play had the cousins completely baffled.

Ampon was the man who held the limelight, with his angled volleying and smashing. Sanchez, too, revealed an improvement in his overhead work, and together the visitors rode Colf rough-shod over the Rumjahns until the latter picked up.

But though Sanchez made a number or errors in the second, the Davis Cuppers always appeared the better pair because of their ability to score winners whenever the opportunities presented themselves, and they went out in the tenth game.

Dr. Wellington Roo, the Chinese Ambassador to France, was among the large crowd present at the match. The weather was dull after yesterday's rain, the light was not too good and the court was in poor condition. Kho Sin-kle led Destremau by two sets to one at one stage, but was finally beaten after five sets, the fifth one of the which he lost to love.

The Chinese played from the back of the court almost throughout the whole game with characteristic doggedness. His chief weapon was a vicious forchand cross-court drive, but Destreman had an effective counter in superior anticipation and execution at the net. ... The slowness of the court was to Kho's advantage in the first two sets when he repeatedly passed the Frenchman with his backhand, but thereafter Destreman started a desperate attack for which the Chinese had no answer,

In the last set Destremau hit the ball terrifically hard and almost swept his opponent off the court. The scores in favour of Destremau were 5-7, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5 · 6-0,

P& O-BRITISH INDIA (APCAR) AND THE "RANGEY"? TYPE

That's What They Call Her In America...

CHE'S the sort of girl you expect to come and hulloo at you round the corner of the housewho looks at her best striding round in tweeds and brogues. She's the kind of girl who used to think that fashion pages weren't meant for her -and so they weren't.

But now all that is changed. The American college girl has established herself as a type, and the adjective "rangey" has been tailored to suit her.

She's the devil-may-care jumper and skirt girl more fond of the country than the town, of low heels and high, and of waves than curls.

The "rangey" girl who looks her best in sults-and nowadays that doesn't mean that she's condemned to perpetual tweediness,

She should avoid black town suits-she can carry colour at any time and in any place, and should do so. She's the one who can wear skirts.

These things suit the "Rangey" type-

In the evening her main aim should be comfort. An evening dress of Grecian rather than Victorlan inspiration suits her best.

Her hands must look as good holding a champagne glass as they do holding reins.

She's the jumper-and-skirt girl Class One. She can follow the American college girl custom of wearing a contrasting cardigan back to front over her round-necked, short-sleeved sweater. She's one of the few women who can get away with casual hair styles—dishevelled, wiry curls, or a low-swinging bob, turned under at the ends.

Her feet look their best, and feel their happiest, in flat shoes. She can wear platform shoes by day, wedge heels for a cocktail party (if her feet are small enough), thick cork-soled sandals in the evening (if she's not too tall).

It's nice to be "rangey." If you've decided that you're the "rangey" type, go ahead, lady, and make the best of yourself.
